- and we have convenient access to decision-makers, when new decisions need to be made. Here access to network and solution-oriented partners are easy; both public and private as well as across traditional topics and sectors. We are always open to a conversation about new collaborations and partnerships.

The Danish robot, drone, and automation industry is developing rapidly, and is a major recognized global robotics hub, with high growth startups and world-leading research.

Since 2011, collaboration, research and development based on interdisciplinary private/public network in Odense, Fyn has been expanded and strengthened, and this is the foundation and expertise on which the future of the drone industry on Fyn is constructed. With the Danish drone test center located in Odense at Hans Christian Andersen (HCA) Airport, Fyn's ecosystem has played a crucial role in the development of the drone industry in Denmark, and the drone story of Fyn has been around for quite a few years now.

In Odense, UAS Denmark Test Center is an unmanned systems technology test and development center with 2,000 square kilometers of airspace created in a partnership between HCA Airport, the City of Odense and the University of Southern Denmark (SDU).

The partnership has a close collaboration with Odense Robotics (Denmark's national robotics and drone cluster) and the companies in the cluster – a true triple-helix partnership.

The center upgrades drone potentials by having the best possible conditions for startups, companies, public authorities, and last but not least by providing access to testing, knowledge, skills, and an ecosystem of the highest calibre right in the middle of the European robot hotspot in Odense. The test center has a close interdisciplinary collaboration with authorities, knowledge institutions and the industry - both nationally and internationally.

It is with great pleasure that I, as the Mayor of the city of Odense, welcome you (back) to the International Drone Show in Odense.

Odense is still undergoing a rapid development, expanding in size as well in importance- a city with the highest ambitions to ensure the perfect setting for national as well as international business and events.

Odense is situated on the island of Fyn, right in the heart of Denmark, and is the country's third largest city with 210,000 inhabitants. The city is one of Denmark's oldest and was granted town rights in the year 988. Today the city is known as an innovative and vibrant city, a city of education, science, and growth with historic roots and it is the hometown of the celebrated author Hans Christian Andersen.

One of the world's leading robotics cities and the strongest platform for drone technology

Odense has a strong collaboration between educational and knowledge institutions, companies, local authorities, and cluster organisations. The collaboration strengthens, and is strengthened by, the ecosystem on Fyn and industry in Denmark and globally, and is a fruitful story focused on robots, drones, shipping, health, research, and innovation.

The ecosystem is the story of that special thing that differentiates Odense and Fyn from other destinations. The positions of strength that create the value chain, awaken curiosity, and attract new national and international collaborations and partners.

Over the next few years, international test environments, demonstration projects and new skills will accelerate and ensure that partners in Fyn's initiatives remain at the forefront of developments – prepared for the drone industry of the future.

Some of the most prominent robotics brands originated in Odense, and this is why we are proud to support the development being made - with new developments and milestones in the industry being Made in Odense.

With the continuous development of the robotics and drone stronghold in Odense, the city is proud to welcome participants to International Drone Show, to showcase why Odense is the City of Robots.
